Seeing You in Seattle

If you've never been to the Pacific Northwest this is one of those areas which are just plain stunning. (Going AWOL 2 days then caught by the Shore Patrol and then leaving Ft. Lewis for 'Nam doesn't count.) There are 20 museums and 100 art galleries there. There is also something called the Fish Market which is unique, to say the least. And they even have a spinning restaurant stuck on a stick (aka: the Space Needle). We didn't try to cherry pick events for you. Too many good ones. And many of them are free. (Warning: Seattle is not flat.) Red Lion will pick you up at the airport 24/7. There are posts there A, B, C, & D with land lines direct to our Renton Red Lion. No limo, subway, or taxi is needed. Red Lion has a very good restaurant. Breakfast is $12 but we get it for $10 & they are constantly renewing it. There are other restaurants w/in walking distance of our hotel in Renton (Which is flat) The hotel shuttle will take you to the Light Rail which takes you downtown & back for under $10. (Warning: Seattle is not flat.) Parking is free at our hotel & there's lots of it. Driving in, or to, downtown Seattle is not a good idea.

Banquet Menu: Catch of the Day

This has nothing to do with Mermaids. Catch of the Day is fresh fish right off of the boat and then cooked and served. We are hoping to get wild caught Salmon. However, if there is no suitable Catch of the Day, Chicken will be substituted.

Newsletters

Our newsletters have evolved over these last 20+ years. Usually we start out with out with an article about something back in 'Nam. I do know, from experience, that many men can see the same incident many different ways (and all be right) which is why we always try to make sure we have a good hospitality suite at these reunions so that all of us may talk these things out among ourselves. We also publish meeting minutes and financials. Both are discussed and adopted at the business meeting and available in our Newsletters.

I would like to focus on what's going on in our lives now. For example, there's a great PTSD article in this issue. Or VA stories (be nice now...or not) could help us help each other.

I would also like to add an On the Mend item which sounds a little better than 'sick call' (no need to sham now...) which can help us help each other. As well as Moving On for acknowledgement of our brothers who have died since our last get together. Or if you win the lottery we'd all be there for you...This is your newsletter so if you've got an idea let us hear it. If it stinks we'll let you hear it. Just say'n.

Agenda The above will be items on our business meeting agenda which means we can vote on it then if we want to. Any one of you can request that an item or proposed course of action be placed on the agenda. The cutoff date for this is one month before the business meeting. If something comes up late we can always discuss it under new business. I would also like to discuss reformation/revival of the Reunion Committee as well as our overall financial picture and practices.

We've already worked out some of the D.C. meet (2017) & need to vote on 2018. Honolulu? London? Copenhagen? Kansas City? New Orleans? New York? Old York? Tijuana? Somebody please step up...

Washington, D.C. Reunion
Crowne Plaza, Dulles Airport
May 17—May 21, 2017

Contracts are done for D.C. in 2017. We stayed at the Crowne Plaza in 2007 and in 2011. The dates are May 17, 2017 to May 21, 2017, including 3 days before and 3 days after. Room rates are $105/night. The hotel is 2 miles from the airport and the hotel provides shuttle service 24/7. Remember, we chartered those 55 seat buses for our trip to the Wall? Now, they have shuttle to a Metro station about 4 miles from the Hotel. The Metro takes less than 15 minutes to get to the Wall, while our bus took about 40. They tell me it is a straight shot to the memorials when you go by Metro. The Hotel will provide shuttle service so that we can catch the Metro into D.C. for our ceremony at the Vietnam Memorial Wall. A large shopping center is across the street where there are many restaurants serving a variety of cuisine.

PTSD

I know that I have experienced undiagnosed PTSD. Many, perhaps all, combat veterans have experienced symptoms of it in one form or another. Some of us deal with it in our own way without help. Some require help to recover. Some never recover.

For me, PTSD was evidenced by behaviors that at best were stupid, at worst destructive. I spent the better part of a year and a half after my return from Viet Nam in a state of semi-alcoholism. I took chances, drove while intoxicated, and was sometimes abusive to those who loved me most. Luckily for me, I met and married a wonderful woman who helped to dampen my fears, calm my rages and get me to see the long view of life. Symptoms were many. It took me four years after Viet Nam to sleep through a night. I would hear a noise, wake up and prowl our apartment with a loaded .357 Magnum. I have always been competitive and to some extent, that was positive. But it was easy to let it get out of hand unless I kept it in check. There were and now rarely are the dreams. I wake up screaming. Being able to address and discount the demons, the irrational fears and to face the fact that I survived, somehow, and many others did not was also key in my beating PTSD.

I also think that being raised under the Judeo-Christian ethic which states: “Thou shalt not kill” and “Love thy neighbor” contributed to my PTSD. I felt caught up in a dichotomy. I was drafted into a situation where it was either kill or be killed and I had no choice in the matter except that I wanted to live and would do what it took to live. To me I was between the proverbial rock and a hard place. The programming of my socialization made me feel guilty. That has been hard to deal with.

I was lucky in one aspect of this dilemma. I was, as a college graduate, older and more mentally and emotionally mature than many of my peers. I was therefore able to rationalize some of the things that I had to do to survive in a way that many of my peers had a difficult time in doing.

Everyone deals with things in different ways. Some withdraw into themselves. Most of us at least occasionally display the “thousand mile stare” characteristic of many combat vets. It is hard for us to make close friends due to our fear that they may be killed and the comradeship and happiness we had with them be ripped out of our lives. When that happened to us in combat, a little of each of us died with them. So it becomes very difficult for us to make fast friends and to let others into our lives in the same way that we did prior to our combat experiences. This is probably the most difficult thing to rationalize.

Again I was a lucky man as I was successful as a combat leader in seeing all of those that I was directly responsible for get through the combat tour alive and at least physically unscathed. I don't know how I would have reacted if some of them had been killed and I had to face the “what if I had done things differently question” that so many have had to deal with. Would that have pushed me off the deep end? I'm glad I never had to ask that question because like others who did, I don't know what the answer would have been.

What was I fighting for in Viet Nam? It certainly did not have anything to do with patriotism, country or even family. It was partly expectations, partly coercion, but for the most part I believe that we fought to survive. We fought for each other knowing that our survival depended on not just our individual actions but the actions of the team, squad, platoon and company and that failure to act or react properly jeopardized the safety of all of us. That made each of us responsible to every other soldier in the unit.

I think that one of the root causes of PTSD is this feeling of responsibility. Ironic in a way in that it is also a key reason most people survived. Responsibility coupled with the fears and other demons of war are, when viewed through the clouded glass of one's socialization and personal experiences and perceptions are, in my view, at the roots of PTSD. As I said in paragraph one, I believe that most combat veterans have experienced symptoms of PTSD in one form or another. How we have dealt with it has, to a great extent, determined the course of our lives since the combat experience.

As a commander during the Korean War, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Bronze Star Medal for Valor and two Purple Hearts. His two tours in Vietnam earned him two Silver Stars, two additional Bronze Star Medals for Valor and a third Purple Heart. His dedication to the Army, as evidenced by his numerous decorations, has continued even into his retirement.

MG Hemphill has arranged the tour at the Joint Base Lewis-McChord (JBLM) on Friday (May,20) as well as arrange for 2 senior leaders from JBLM to speak to us after dinner at about 8PM on Thursday evening (May 19), in the Hospitality Suite, for about an hour. They will give briefings on the I Corps Mission in the Pacific and the operation of the Joint Base Lewis-McChord. The briefing is an excellent prelude to the tour the next day.

Memoir of An Angry Skipper

From an early age Henry "Rocky" Colavita dreamed of becoming an Army officer. And a policeman. He eventually did both. His engaging, often funny memoir covers the author's 20 year career in the U.S. Army, including multiple tours in Vietnam, and his subsequent 17 year career in law enforcement. Henry was born in New Jersey, raised in Hawaii for a time and grew up in Virginia where most of his schoolmates were Army brats. But his next door neighbor was a cop. The perfect situation for him to develop an affinity for service, both military and public. Wounded in Vietnam on his first tour, he returned for a second tour, this time as Infantry captain in command. He returned home, age 28, and continued his military career--including a stint at The Pentagon and in Berlin, eventually retiring in 1983 and beginning his second career--in law enforcement. <http://hellgatepress.com/henry-rocky-colavita/company-grade> also found on Amazon.

About the Author

Henry "Rocky" Colavita served multiple tours in Vietnam. His first was as an advisor with the Vietnamese Airborne in '65 & '66, and the second as a company commander with the 1st Cavalry Division in '68 & '69. After 20 years he retired from the Army as lieutenant colonel and was then hired by the Fairfax County, VA Sheriff's Office where, over the next 17 years, he progressed through every rank from private to Chief Deputy Sheriff. He currently lives in Haymarket, VA.

Law Now Allows Retirees and Veterans to Salute Flag

Traditionally, members of the nation's veterans service organizations have rendered the hand-salute during the national anthem and at events involving the national flag only while wearing their organization's official head-gear.

The National Defense Authorization Act of 2008 contained an amendment to allow un-uniformed service members, military retirees, and veterans to render a hand-salute during the hoisting, lowering, or passing of the U.S. flag. (This includes outdoors, indoors, or not covered — WDN.)

A later amendment further authorized hand-salutes during the national anthem by veterans and out-of-uniform military personnel. This was included in the Defense Authorization Act of 2009, which President Bush signed on Oct. 14, 2008. (This includes outdoors, indoors, covered, or not covered — WDN.)

Here is the actual text from the law:

SEC. 595. Military Salute for the Flag During the National Anthem by Members of the Armed Forces not in Uniform and by Veterans.

(A) individuals in uniform should give the military salute at the first note of the anthem and maintain that position until the last note.

(B) members of the Armed Forces and veterans who are present but not in uniform may render the military salute in the manner provided for individuals in uniform; and

(C) all other persons present should face the flag and stand at attention with their right hand over the heart, and men not in uniform, if applicable, should remove their headdress with their right hand and hold it at their right shoulder, the hand being over the heart.

Note: Part (C) applies to those not in the military and non-veterans. Article Courtesy W.D. Neal, (Skipper 6, 71)
